Worshippers in safety hats attend Notre-Dame's first mass since fire

Most of the donations pledged had not been received yet.

A small congregation in white hard hats attended mass at Notre-Dame cathedral in Paris on Saturday, the first service since fire devastated the Gothic landmark two months ago.

Church leaders are keen to show life goes on at the cathedral as donations for rebuilding trickle in.

Less than 10 percent of the 850 million euros ($953 million) pledged by billionaires, business leaders and others had been received so far, the French government said.

The mass, which commemorates the cathedral's consecration as a place of worship, was held in a side chapel left undamaged by the April 15 fire, with attendance limited to about 30 people wearing protective headgear.

Priests in ceremonial garb of white robes and yellow stoles briefly parted with their hard hats during the communion.

"It is with much emotion that we are here to celebrate the consecration of the cathedral," said Paris's Archbishop Michel Aupetit, who led the service.

"It is a message of hope and thanks to all those who were moved by what happened to this cathedral," he added, acknowledging afterwards it was "a bit strange" to celebrate mass with a helmet.

The service was broadcast live on a religious TV channel that showed poignant images of the blue sky through the collapsed roof and the black rubble still clogging the building.

On Friday, France's Culture Minister Franck Riester said the cathedral was still in a fragile state, especially the vault.

The blaze caused the roof and spire of the architectural masterpiece to collapse, triggering worldwide sadness.

Among those who promised to donate to the rebuilding effort were luxury goods tycoons Bernard Arnault and François-Henri Pinault. REUTERS

Phoenix mayor sorry after police pull gun on parents

2 The mayor of Phoenix apologized and called a community meeting for this week amid public anger over a viral video showing police pointing a gun at the parents of a young child over allegations she shoplifted a doll. Cellphone video showed a Phoenix officer drawing his weapon and shouting profanities after a father, mother and two young daughters left the Family Dollar store on May 27. Officers confronted the family in a parking lot, with at least one pulling his gun, cursing at the adults and yelling at them to put up their hands, while threatening to shoot them if they failed to comply, according to the cellphone video. Mayor Kate Gallego wrote on Twitter late on Saturday that the incident, which sparked anger on social media, made her feel "sick." She apologized to the family and noted that the city would speed up the rollout of body-worn cameras. REUTERS

Mexico detains nearly 800 undocumented migrants

3 Mexican officials detained nearly 800 undocumented migrants in eastern Mexico in four trucks on Saturday, the government said. Mexico's National Migration Institute (INM) said in a statement late on Saturday that 791 foreign nationals were found in the trucks stopped in the eastern state of Veracruz, confirming earlier reports about a mass detention. The apprehension came as Mexico steps up efforts to reduce a surge of migrants toward the U.S. border under pressure from President Donald Trump, who has vowed to hit Mexican goods with tariffs if Mexico does not stem illegal immigration. Mexico made a deal on June 7 with the U.S. to avert the tariffs, setting the clock ticking on a 45-day period for the Mexican government to make palpable progress in reducing the numbers of people trying to cross the U.S. border illegally. Investigation promised following Argentina blackout

4 Argentine President Mauricio Macri called the massive blackout that left tens of millions in South America without power on Sunday "unprecedented," and promised a thorough investigation. Argentina's grid "collapsed" at about 7 a.m. local time, leaving the entire country without power, Argentina's Energy Secretariat said. The outage also cut electricity to much of neighboring Uruguay and swaths of Paraguay, and shut down YPF's La Plata refinery, Argentina's largest. Macri said the blackout had been prompted by a failure in the country's coastal grid, but said that officials still did not know what had caused the problem. Half of Argentina had power by mid-afternoon, Macri said. "The city is a disaster. There are no traffic lights. Stores aren't open. It spoiled Father's Day," said 75-year-old retiree Liliana Comis, of Buenos Aires. REUTERS

Israel launches 'Trump Heights' on Golan, but construction may lag

The project comes after the president recognized Israel's sovereignty.

Israel approved in principle on Sunday a new community named after President Donald Trump on a contested frontier zone with Syria — but construction looked likely to lag given Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's political stumbles.

The "Trump Heights" project is intended to cement ties after Trump broke with other world powers to recognize Israeli sovereignty over the plateau in March.

At a special cabinet session in Beruchim, a sparse clutch of homes just 7.5 miles from the Golan Heights armistice line with Syria, Netanyahu unveiled a sign labeled "Trump Heights" in English and Hebrew.

The sign was decorated with the Israeli and U.S. flags and planted on a patch of synthetic grass.

Israel captured the Golan from Syria in a 1967 war and later annexed and settled it — moves not accepted by most world powers, who deem it to be occupied Syrian territory.

Ongoing hostilities between Israel and Syria, and internal Syrian fighting that drew Iranian-backed auxiliaries to back Damascus and deploy near the Golan, helped Netanyahu make his case for Trump to recognize the Israeli claim of sovereignty.

Trump similarly delighted Israelis — while appalling other world powers — by recognizing Jerusalem as their capital and withdrawing from the 2015 Iran nuclear deal.

"Trump is a great friend of Israel," Netanyahu said.

"He has torn the mask off this hypocrisy which doesn't recognize the obvious."

"DUMMY RESOLUTION"

Israeli authorities hope a revamping of Beruchim, home to an aging immigrant community from the former Soviet Union, to "Trump Heights" might bring a resident influx.

But a June 12 memorandum from Netanyahu's office showed the plan was far from implementation: it lacks earmarked funds as well as final approval for its precise location and name.

"In this [cabinet] resolution, it is proposed that the name of the community, if it is founded, be 'Trump Heights,'" said the memorandum, signed by a deputy legal counselor, Yael Cohen.

The hesitancy was in part due to the fact that Netanyahu heads a caretaker government, having failed to form a coalition after coming ahead in Israel's April 9 election. The conservative four-term premier must now contest a Sept. 17 vote.

In such an interval, Cohen wrote, legal rulings "require, as a general rule, restraint in decision-making" by the cabinet.

"Whoever reads the small print on the 'historic' resolution understands that it is a dummy resolution," tweeted Zvi Hauser, an ex-Netanyahu cabinet secretary now with an opposition party.

Netanyahu's political flailing has tested the patience of Trump, who earlier this month said Israel was "all messed up" over the election and needed to "get their act together."

Trump advisers had predicted the plan would be made public this month, but officials now say that is unlikely to happen until after the September election. REUTERS

The MTA and NYPD are stepping up fare evasion enforcement on subways and buses.

Evading the fare impacts the MTA's ability to improve service and is subject to a $100 fine.

Help prevent fare evasion:

Use turnstiles to enter and exit the subway.

If you need the subway gate, don't hold it open.

Board through the front door on local buses and have your fare ready.

Buy your ticket before you board and keep it throughout your ride on Select Bus Service.

China prepared for long US trade fight, its journal claims

The "majority of Americans will suffer," according to the journal Qiushi.

The United States has underestimated the Chinese people's will to fight a trade war and Beijing is prepared for a long economic battle, an influential Chinese Communist Party journal said on Sunday.

China would not give way on major principles in its negotiations with the United States on ending the dispute, the commentary in the ideological journal Qiushi, or Seeking Truth, said.

The editorial represented "a further mobilization of Chinese society" in the struggle against U.S. trade pressure, wrote Hu Xijin, editor in chief of the state-run Global Times newspaper, in a tweet.

"China will not be afraid of any threats or pressure the United States is making that may escalate economic and trade frictions. China has no choice, nor escape route, and will just have to fight it out till the end," the commentary said.

"No one, no force should underestimate and belittle the steel will of the Chinese people and its strength and tenacity to fight a war."

The U.S. kicked off a tariff battle with China in 2018, seeking sweeping structural changes from Beijing and alleging that the Chinese have engaged in intellectual property theft over many years, which China denies.

But tensions rose sharply in May after the Trump administration accused China of reneging on promises it had made during months of talks.

The commentary also accused the United States of trying to hamper Chinese technological innovation.

"We must keep the initiative of innovation and development firmly in our hands, increase investment and research in key, core technology areas, pool together more high-value talents, enhance innovation and get rid of the core technology plight," it said.

President Donald Trump's top economic advisor, Larry Kudlow, said on Thursday the economic burden of a trade war would shift to China.

Qiushi said U.S. consumers and businesses had reaped huge benefits from trade with China and warned that trade frictions would inevitably have a serious negative impact on the U.S. economy.

> "No one, no force should underestimate and belittle the steel will of the Chinese people and its strength and tenacity to fight a war."
> Commentary in Chinese Communist Party journal Qiushi

"In an era of economic globalization, trade protectionism is poison, not panacea," the article said, adding that higher tariffs would increase manufacturing costs for U.S. businesses and push up U.S. consumer inflation.

"As a result of the trade frictions, only a very few Americans will benefit, but the majority of Americans will suffer."

The U.S. Trade Representative's Office on Monday will kick off seven days of testimony from U.S. retailers, manufacturers and other businesses about Trump's plan to hit another $300 billion worth of Chinese goods with tariffs. REUTERS

Boeing crisis, trade tensions cast pall over air show

The planemaker is trying to reassure customers following two fatal 737 Max crashes.

Safety concerns, trade wars and growing security tensions in the Gulf are dampening spirits at the world's largest planemakers as they arrive at this week's Paris Airshow with little to celebrate despite bulging order books.

The aerospace industry's marquee event is a chance to take the pulse of the $150 billion a year commercial aircraft industry, which many analysts believe is entering a slowdown due to global pressures from trade tensions to flagging economies.

Humbled by the grounding of its 737 Max in the wake of two fatal crashes, Boeing will be looking to reassure customers and suppliers about the plane's future and allay criticism of its handling of the crisis.

The grounding of the latest version of the world's most-sold jet has rattled suppliers and even fazed rival Airbus, with the European company avoiding the traditional baiting of Boeing, while remaining distracted by its own corruption probe.

Aerospace executives on both sides of the Atlantic are concerned about the impact of the crisis on public confidence in air travel and the risk of a backlash that could drive a wedge between regulators and undermine the plane certification system.

Airlines that rushed to buy the fuel-efficient, longer-range Max are taking a hit to profits since having to cancel thousands of flights following March's worldwide grounding

Even the planned launch of a new longer-range version of the successful A320neo jet family from Airbus, the A321XLR, is unlikely to lift the industry's uncertainty, analysts said.

"Boeing's Max crisis isn't the most ominous dark cloud, since it can be solved, but traffic numbers are genuinely scary," said Teal Group aerospace analyst Richard Aboulafia.

"If March and April are a sign of things to come, we're looking at broader industry demand and capacity problems."

People walk past aircrafts on static display. REUTERS

"Net orders might be the lowest in years," Aboulafia added.

Others dismiss fears of a downturn, citing the growth of Asia's middle class and the need for airlines to buy new planes to meet environmental targets.

Airbus and Boeing are both looking at steps to make their aircraft more fuel efficient and reduce their carbon footprint amid a growing environmental protest movement in Europe.

"The only solution that the industry has is the newest, most fuel-efficient aircraft," John Plueger, chief executive of Air Lease Corp., told Reuters. "So that replacement cycle is going to continue."

"We're talking to so many airlines who still want more aircraft, and there's really been no lessening of those discussions," he said.

GULF TENSIONS

Boeing is delaying key decisions on the launch of a possible new aircraft, the mid-sized NMA, to give full attention to the 737 Max and last-minute engine trouble on the forthcoming 777X, industry sources said.

Robert Stallard of Vertical Research Partners expects roughly 800 aircraft orders at the show, but noted it can be hard to tell which are truly new, firm business or old orders, or switched models. That compares with some 959 orders and commitments at the Farnborough Airshow last year.

Some analysts expected the total closer to 400. REUTERS

Doctors Urge Knee Pain Sufferers

"Don't Get ANY Surgery Until You SeeThis…"

After Years Of Intense Study, NYC Medical Clinic Finally Reveals It's Best "Treatment Formula" For Helping Knee Arthritis Sufferers... Especially When So Many Other Treatments Have Failed

NEW YORK CITY - If you are even remotely interested in discovering how the latest scientific discoveries can possibly help your knee pain... then this is going is be the most exciting information you ever read.

Here is why: Knee pain can not only be brutal... it's complex. In other words, it's not a simple, easy fix.

But I'm sure you already know that. Or you wouldn't be reading this.

That's the bad news.

Now for some good news...

Over the years, NYC Pain MD has treated countless knee pain sufferers. And in that time have been able to constantly improve.

And we have come up with a treatment formula that we have found works best and helps the most patients.

This formula has reduced or even eliminated the pain in many. Some were scheduled for knee replacement surgery and felt good enough to cancel their surgery.

It's amazing when patients who were once in excruciating pain... start feeling better. And start walking again. And playing golf. Or tennis. And finally getting their lives back.

Especially when they had gone to other doctors and tried so many other things.

So many had given up hope.

Sound familiar? If it does... check this out...

The Treatment Formula

While I can't give you the entire treatment formula here (there is not enough space and WAY too complicated) I can give you the basics. And more important... I can tell you what it might be able to do for YOU.

The first and most important part of the formula is: PATIENT SELECTION.

This means, NYC Pain MD has a detailed screening process to tell who is most likely to be helped by their treatments... and who is not.

If you qualify, you have the opportunity to move forward and experience the worldclass treatments that NYC Pain MD offers.

If you do not, NYC Pain MD will tell you what they think your best options are and help you find the right doctor for you.

NYC Pain MD "Treatment Formula" A protocol of advanced medical treatments that has already helped thousands.

If you qualify, NYC Pain MD offers some of the most advanced medical treatments available today all using the most advanced imaging technology including:

- Viscosupplementation (gel injections)
- Platelet Rich Plasma (PRP)
- Stem Cell Therapy (Lipogems)
- Genicular Knee Block
- And more.

Once again, there is not enough space to go into detail about all these procedures... but here are some things you MUST KNOW....

Viscosupplementation is where a doctor introduces a gel-like medicine directly into the joint space. This helps to lubricate the joints often relieving some, most or even all of your pain. Results can last for 6 months to several years.

Many have had these treatments without good results. However, NYC Pain MD feels this is because doctors often do these "gel injections" without advanced imaging to guide them. Research shows they will often miss the joint. If the joint is missed... it is impossible for the treatment to work.

NYC Pain MD has spared no expense and used advanced imaging to guide the injections assuring the medicine gets into the joint. We frequently get results when this treatment was a failure done elsewhere.

The second thing you must know is... our treatment plans are custom made for every patent. And we have all these treatments offered in the same place. Many times you will get the best results from multiple treatments. At NYC Pain MD your doctors will all be there and will all know each other and you and your case. They work together and give you the best treatments and care without you having to go anywhere else.

The ability to select the right patients and then have the potential to give them any or all of these treatments... with all the necessary medical technology... under one roof... has allowed NYC Pain MD to get better results than they thought possible.

Here's What You Should Do Next

If you suffer with knee pain... and any of this made sense to you... NYC Pain MD would like to offer you a No-cost screening. That screening is the first step in our "Treatment Formula."

You will get to see a doctor and ask any questions you have. Your doctor will take the first steps to see if you qualify for treatments and give you recommendations.

The best thing is... you will finally get direction. You will know what's going on and what is your best course of action… step-by-step. The treatments will be explained in detail and you will breathe a big sigh of relief finally knowing what's going on and what can or cannot be done.

There is so much we want to say to help you... but I'm out of space. Give us a call at 877-296-6310 and take the first step. That step is free without obligation.

An oil tanker is seen after it was attacked in the Gulf of Oman. REUTERS

Blast-hit tankers to be assessed off UAE coast

Several world leaders are "certain" Iran is behind the attacks.

The two oil tankers crippled in attacks in the Gulf of Oman last week that Washington and Riyadh have blamed on Iran are being assessed off the coast off the United Arab Emirates before their cargos are unloaded, the ships' operators said on Sunday.

Damage assessment on Japan's Kokuka Courageous and preparation for ship-to-ship transfer of its methanol cargo would start after authorities in Sharjah, one of the UAE's seven emirates, complete security checks, Bernhard Schulte Ship management said.

Thursday's attacks, which also hit Norwegian tanker Front Altair, have heightened tensions between Iran and the United States and its Gulf allies after similar blasts in May struck four ships, including two Saudi oil tankers, off the UAE.

In a show of military strength, the Royal Saudi Air Force flew in joint formation with U.S. F-15 fighter jets over the Gulf Arab region, Saudi state news agency SPA said on Sunday.

Foreign minister Jeremy Hunt said on Sunday Britain was "almost certain" Iran was behind the attacks, adding that London did not believe anyone else could have done it.

Tehran has denied any involvement in the attacks near the Strait of Hormuz, a major transit route for global oil supplies.

The Front Altair is sitting off the coast of Sharjah's Khorfakkan port while the Kokuka Courageous is anchored closer to shore off the emirate's Kalba port, according to Refinitiv Eikon ship tracking data.

"Our crew remain on board the Kokuka Courageous. They are safe and well," Bernhard Schulte said in a statement.

The Kokuka Courageous's 21 crew members were returned to the vessel by the U.S. Navy's Bahrain-based Fifth Fleet after being rescued.

The crew of the Front Altair, who had been picked up by Iranian boats, departed Iran from Bandar Abbas airport to Dubai International Airport on Saturday, the ship's operator Frontline said.

A specialist team will inspect the Front Altair before deciding on how to unload its naphtha cargo. The ship was being towed toward the offshore part of Fujairah emirate, the company said.

FINGER POINTED AT IRAN

It was not clear who would take part in assessing the tankers. After the May 12 attacks, in which a Norwegian-registered tanker was also hit, the UAE launched an investigation in cooperation with the United States, Saudi Arabia, Norway and France, which has a naval base in Abu Dhabi.

The UAE has said the probe shows that a state actor was behind last month's operation, without naming a country, and that naval mines were most likely used.

The United States and Saudi Arabia have directly blamed Iran for the attacks on the six vessels. Saudi Crown Prince Mohammed bin Salman on Saturday urged the international community to take a "decisive stand" but said Riyadh does not want a war.

The attacks have raised fears of broader confrontation in the region where the United States has boosted its military presence over perceived Iranian threats. REUTERS

Demand Soars At NYC Medical Clinic For Promising Back Pain Treatment

Can This Medical Technology Possibly Eliminate Or Greatly Reduce Even The Most Severe Back Pain... Almost Instantly?

The Advanced Medical Treatment Every Back & Neck Pain Sufferer Needs To Know - No Matter How Bad The Pain Is Or How Many Other Treatments Have Failed

NYC Pain MD is a medical clinic with two locations in New York City that has made a name for itself by treating the worst cases of back or neck pain.

Here is what every back and neck pain sufferer who has failed to respond to other treatments and does not want surgery should know about one of the best treatment options available today for severe back and neck pain including when, why and where you should consider this treatment to get maximum results.

If you suffer with back, neck or nerve pain, you have probably already tried many treatments... especially countless pain medications.

Experienced doctors understand that even though pain medications such as anti-inflammatory pain pills are part of the recommended early treatment plan for back pain... they are rarely the answer.

In most cases they have minimal, short term results (if any) and have a laundry list of potential side effects. Some being serious and even life threatening.

Are there any better options?

Thankfully, advancements in science and technology come extremely fast. And now there is very good option to help relieve the pain.

An option that a lot of back and neck pain sufferers may have never heard of before.

Before we get into these treatments, please understand this...

NYC Pain MD is a REAL medical clinic that has treated the worst cases of back pain. Patients travel from all over to be treated at one of their clinics for all sorts of joint and muscle pain because they want the best medical treatments available.

What you are about to discover is a REAL medical treatment. Not some miracle cure you see on infomercials or on the internet.

Know this fact: There is no one treatment that will help every case of back pain. And we cannot guarantee this treatment will work for you. But this treatment has already helped countless back and neck pain sufferers who had given up hope. I bet many just like you.

What is this treatment? It's called...

Radiofrequency Neurotomy

"Radiofrequncy Neurotomy" is often referred to as RF for short.

RF is a procedure that is based on the theory that blocking the nerve supply to the painful area may alleviate pain and restore function.

There are many nerves around your spine and one of their jobs is to sense PAIN.

Radiofrequency waves are delivered to these nerves under advanced imaging to "block" the nerves.

Two procedures are performed. First, a test, diagnostic "Block" procedure is done to determine if the procedure is going to decrease pain and improve function.

If this first "test" procedure is successful, the Radio Frequency Neurotomy is scheduled and performed for longer term relief.

What Results Can You Expect?

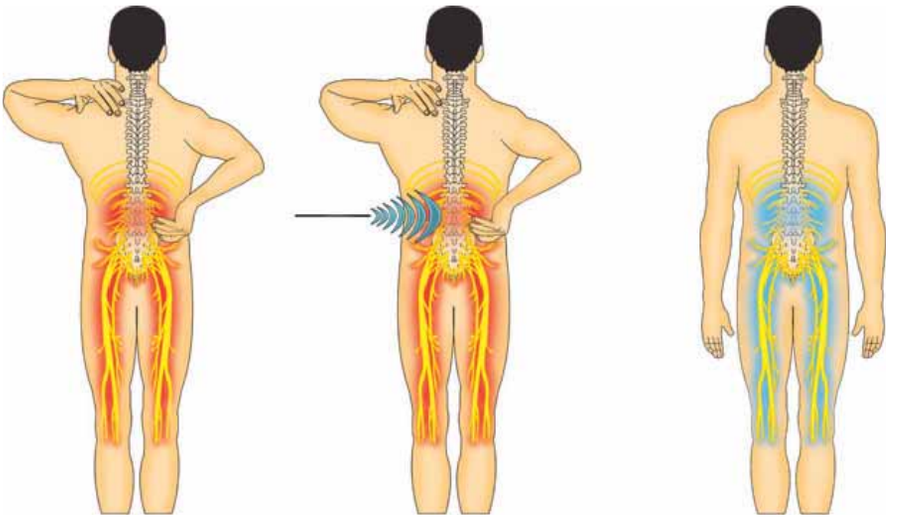
Like all real medical procedures... results vary for individual patients. No good and ethical doctor would guarantee any exact results for any procedure... that's just not how things work and it would be less than honest.

That's being said, it is not uncommon for patients to get complete, if not significant relief of their pain shortly after the treatment.

How Long Do The Results Last?

This procedure "blocks" the nerves pain signals... it does not destroy them. Therefore, the results are safe but not completely permanent. But, many patients get relief for 6 months… 12 months…. 18 months for some and some even longer. The great news is - another procedure can be safely preformed for more relief if necessary.

Advanced Treatment Uses Radio Frequencies To Relieve Serious Neck & Back Pain



Science rescues back & neck pain sufferers?: Radio Frequency Waves are used to block the nerve supply to the painful area and may alleviate pain and restore function to many.

While we cannot claim this is a complete "permanent cure" but... it can be a god-send for so many who were in constant pain.

Really... what would it be worth it to you could get out of pain for long enough so you could start enjoying your everyday life again?

Would it be worth it to be able to finally get a good nights sleep again?

How about being able to go for a simple walk or just do your basic daily chores without worrying about so much pain?

Is It Safe?

Yes. This procedure has been done countless times and continues to have an excellent safety record. It is minimally invasive and is not surgical.

Who Should Try This Treatment?

RF should be considered after other treatments, such as anti-inflammatory pain medication and physical therapy do not offer good enough results.

RF has also been found effective AFTER back surgery when patient's still feel pain.

The pain after a failed back surgery can be debilitating for some and this procedure may be the only thing that helps give you relief.

What To Do Next If You Are In Pain And The "X" Factor

Here is the "X" factor many do not consider that might be the difference between you getting the best possible treatment or not.

Many experts suggest choosing a medical clinic that offers all these treatments and has the proper, most advanced technology all under one roof without the need for a surgical center or hospital.

Major Savings In Time And Costs Of Care?

NYC Pain MD's method allows you to avoid expensive hospital or out patient surgi-center facility fees which often run 3 to 4 times the cost of the procedure itself. And you don't have to go through the huge stress and time consuming process of going all over the city to outside centers. All the NYC Pain MD treatments can be done in out in-office procedure suites saving you stress, time and dollars. NYC Pain MD believes this additional "X" factor is one of the reasons so many back pain sufferers travel from all over to be treated at one of their advanced medical clinics.

Millions in Hong Kong continue protest, call for leader to quit

A bill calling for citizens to be sent to China for trial was delayed but not withdrawn Saturday.

Hong Kong's leader Carrie Lam apologized to its people on Sunday as an estimated 1 million-plus black-clad protesters insisted that she resign over her handling of a bill that would allow citizens to be sent to mainland China for trial.

Organizers said almost 2 million turned out on Sunday to demand that Chief Executive Lam step down in what is becoming the most significant challenge to China's relationship with the territory since it was handed back by Britain 22 years ago.

Sunday's demonstration came in spite of Lam indefinitely delaying — though not withdrawing — the bill on Saturday in a dramatic climbdown that threw into question her ability to continue to lead the city.

On Sunday, she apologized for the way the government had handled the draft law, which had been scheduled for debate last Wednesday, but gave no further insight into its fate.

Organizers pressed ahead with the protest to demand the bill's full withdrawal, as well as to mark their anger at the way police handled a demonstration against it Wednesday, when more than 70 people were injured by rubber bullets and tear gas.

Some of Sunday's marchers held signs saying, "Do not shoot, we are HongKonger."

Police said the demonstration reached 338,000 at its peak. Organizers and police have routinely produced vastly different estimates at recent demonstrations.

338K

Police said the demonstration reached 338,000.

Organizers estimated a protest the week before drew 1 million while police said 240,000.

"It's much bigger today. Many more people," said one protester who gave her name as Ms. Wong. "I came today because of what happened on Wednesday, with the police violence."

Loud cheers rang out when activists called through loud hailers for Lam's resignation and the cry "step down" echoed through the streets.

"[An] apology is not enough," said demonstrator Victor Li, 19.

"SHORTING" CARRIE LAM

The protests have plunged Hong Kong into political crisis, heaping pressure on Lam's administration and her official backers in Beijing.

Critics say the planned extradition law could threaten Hong Kong's rule of law and its international reputation as an Asian financial hub. Some Hong Kong tycoons have already started moving personal wealth offshore.

U.S. Secretary of State Mike Pompeo said President Trump would raise the issue of Hong Kong human rights at a potential meeting with Chinese president Xi Jinping at the G20 summit in Japan this month.

In a blog post published on Sunday, Hong Kong Financial Secretary Paul Chan sought to play down the impact of the protests.

"Even if the external environment continues to be unclear and the social atmosphere is tense recently, overall Hong Kong's economic and financial markets are still operating in a stable and orderly manner," he wrote.

Activist investor David Webb, in a newsletter on Sunday, said if Lam was a stock he would recommend shorting her with a target price of zero.

"Call it the Carrie trade. She has irrevocably lost the public's trust," Webb said. "Her minders in Beijing, while expressing public support for now, have clearly lined her up for the chop."

In another indication of a possible shift of mood in the Chinese capital, a leader of the pro-democracy "Occupy" demonstrations that galvanized Hong Kong in 2014 appeared set to be released from jail.

Joshua Wong's pro-democracy Demosisto movement said he would be freed on Monday.

Chinese censors have been working hard to erase or block news of the latest series of protests — the largest since crowds demonstrated against the bloody suppression of pro-democracy activists in and around Beijing's Tiananmen Square in June 1989 — amid concerns that any large public rallies could inspire demonstrations on the mainland.

Pompeo said in an interview with "Fox News Sunday" he was sure the protests would be among the issues that Trump and Xi will discuss.

"We're watching the people of Hong Kong speak about the things they value, and we'll see what Lam's decision is in the coming days and weeks," Pompeo said. REUTERS

Local pride drives Showtime's Boston-based 'City on a Hill'

The first episode of the cops-crooks-and-corruption series sets its sights on some hard hometown truths.

NATE HOMAN
letters@metro.us

A wicked-big storm is brewing in Showtime's Boston-based "City on a Hill."

Irony abounds within the infamous camaraderie and cooperation between cops, crooks, a city's corrupt system and an impenetrable code of silence. "City on a Hill" also turns the spotlight directly on the town's fever pitch for "willful" segregation, and blind-eyed omerta when acknowledging the rampant racism dismissed as neighborhood locker room talk in a fictitious depiction of boys in blue chasing armored car boosters from Charlestown during the Charles Stuart era.

It's not 1983 anymore, and times have changed, but Kevin Bacon's character FBI Agent Jackie Rohr hasn't quite caught up yet. The embittered, hard-drinking, coke-snorting, gray-area-of-legal-landscape margin-walking, part-time concerned father, full-time head-breaking FBI agent teams up with a morally solid assistant DA looking to clean house in Boston's legal system from Beacon Hill to Bunker Hill.

"What used to make this city great is that it used to be run by bad men who understood that they were bad," he tells his inebriated law-enforcer friends.

Kevin Bacon has already been a cop in the city on a hill when he played the detective in that wicked-dark movie based on Dorchester native Dennis Lehane's wicked-dark novel, "Mystic River."

A fair share of locals offered a helping hand in crafting the cop drama to keep it authentic. Thus, the show features a Purity Supreme, cops drinking cups of Doughboy Donuts coffee, a guy in a scally cap scratching scratch tickets, a guy from Southie who says he ain't a rat and name-drops Lincoln Steffens, Doug Flutie and "Cadillac" Frank Salemme, the mafia goon who muscled control of The Channel in 1992.

Hyde Park native Jere Shea said what started as a part-time role turned into a season regular as Detective Hank Signa.

"This is a massable group of actors who are either from the area or have played Bostonians before in different roles who bring the level of authenticity that those who were starting from scratch could immediately catch on and embody," he says.

It also goes without saying that someone from the area probably knew somebody around town who might have known a little bit about something that happened that they didn't talk about back in the day.

"Growing up in Dot, we knew cops like that," actor Kevin Chapman told the Dorchester Reporter.

"They weren't necessarily by-the-book individuals, but they were ineffective in their own dysfunctional way. That's the way I approached J.R. He's not going to win awards for procedures and policies, but he gets it done."

Investigative reporter and author Michele McPhee offered a helping hand. She said the entire cast and crew were obsessed with making sure the era was exact with wardrobe, dialogue, set design and props.

"Boston has always been seen by the show creator as one of the main characters in 'City on A Hill,' a living, breathing entity," McPhee said. "The Boston Miracle spawned the community policing model for the BPD that has been duplicated all over the country, making that time and place nationally recognizable."

Marco Benevento brings his pop kaleidoscope to Industry City

The inventive piano virtuoso will be testing out new material in Brooklyn next week.

PAT KING

MATTHEW LONG

What's the point of making music that doesn't surprise you? You could either follow a trail that has already been blazed or you could back up your cement truck and pave a new path with your fresh ideas — or some other corny metaphor like that. Throughout his long and acclaimed career, piano virtuoso Marco Benevento has experimented within forms and flipped them from the inside, out.

While attending Berklee College of Music, the New Jersey native met his longtime musical brother in arms, drummer Joe Russo, and started the experimental instrumental jazz combo Benevento Russo Duo. They became a hit with not only jazz fans, but rock fans, and a staple on the jam band circuit. Benevento and Russo have maintained their fruitful partnership throughout the years with the hugely successful soulful reimagining of the Grateful Dead's catalog, Joe Russo's Almost Dead, and various other projects. But Benevento has been really letting his creative freak flag fly on his own solo records.

While other musicians who possess the level of chops that Benevento has tend to make lifeless records that showcase their technical abilities at a masturbatory level, Benevento's pop songs brim with creativity and hooks that are accessible to all. His new record out in September, "Let It Slide," is full of surprising moments and takes the listener on a journey spanning from rock and soul, to New Orleans jazz and psychedelia — sometimes within one song. Benevento sat on demos of these new songs for two years before partnering with producer Leon Michels at his studio Diamond Mine in Queens in 2017 to record the album along with musician Nick Movshon. Keeping this tight creative trio helped Benevento stretch into brand-new territories on the record.

"I felt like I was super prepared for this record," said Benevento over the phone. "Because I had been sitting with the demos for close to two years. And when we got together and realistically meeting those guys for the first time in the studio, when we got together for the first time, it was kind of like, 'Oh s—t, right, I mean I got these demos down but I'm up for anything.' But also like, s—t, we got to figure out how this song's going to go. It was like this slow motion of all these songs that, like I said, that I thought that I totally knew. It was kind of like, oh s—t, we're going to totally rediscover and rearrange these tunes and turn them into well-written and well-arranged tunes that make sense to the listener and of course to us. And it was like this opposite dichotomy of going in there and being like, 'Yeah guys, I have all these tunes that are done, let's just record them.' We would listen to them and we would totally change them all. You know, slightly, but enough to make you feel like you were starting from scratch."

The trio felt free to experiment within the studio, and this kind of free-flowing recording process led Benevento to develop a new kind of sound through his piano which he has now dubbed the "Gaffiano." It all started when Benevento would reach inside of his piano to mute the strings live, creating a sound more similar to a muted Japanese stringed instrument. In the studio, he went a step further to cover the strings of the piano with gaffer tape, thus giving the new instrument its name.

Make sure to grab tickets to see Marco Benevento when he plays the City Farm Presents Summer Series in Industry City on Wednesday, June 26.

'You have to answer the questions the film asks'

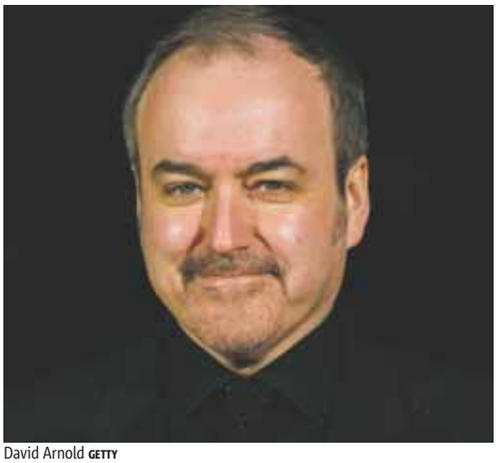
Film and television composer David Arnold discusses his latest project, "Good Omens."

MOLLY GIVEN
Molly.Given@metro.us

You may not know seasoned film and TV composer David Arnold from first glance, but odds are you have heard his incredible work. Arnold is the mastermind behind some of the greatest film and television scores in the industry, including "Sherlock," "Independence Day" and no fewer than five James Bond movies. Arnold's latest project, Amazon's new miniseries "Good Omens," is certainly one for the books. The series is based on the 1990 novel by Terry Pratchett and Neil Gaiman and follows the story of a demon and angel who must become accustomed to life on Earth to prevent the coming of the antichrist and, ultimately, Armageddon. Arnold sat down with Metro to discuss his career, his process when composing masterpieces and why he fell in love with "Good Omens" in the first place.

How did you first get involved with composing for films and television?

I think I always wanted to do it. I went to see a bunch of films when I was about 7 or 8 years old at the cinema, and all of the films were extraordinary in everything including their massive soundtracks. Within a week I had been exposed to these extraordinary things in a cinema where everything is overwhelming, especially if you're little. All of a sudden you're in this place where it's loud and dark, you feel this sort of excitement. There's just so much joy in that experience and there is so much purpose and satisfaction in the end. I knew from that point on that I wanted to be a part of something that made me feel like that.



David Arnold GETTY

What's your process like when writing for a project?

I don't want to start writing anything until I've seen something. I've had many discussions with directors and producers, and I've read scripts and then I've seen the films. Sometimes when I see the films it isn't how I imagined it or how I thought it might be or it isn't quite what we discussed. Films take on a life of their own and they have a kind of sense of self and urgency. It's suddenly out of the writer's hands when everyone has input and opinions. Sometimes your job is to make sure it doesn't veer off course. You have to deliver what you think [the project] needs. You have to try and deliver answers to the questions that the film or show is asking. So I will read the script because I think you're mad not to read the script. What if you hate the script? Why would you even do the film then? So I try to do that, to get a sense of if I like it, and if it's something I think I can do. I also want to like the people I'm doing it with. That's important, when you feel in sync with the people you work with. You certainly don't want to be doing something seven days a week and just do it to get it across the finish line.

Now jumping to "Good Omens," what was the inspiration behind composing the score for Amazon's new miniseries?

The inspiration for this is the picture itself and the story, it's what made me go, "I have to do this." I went to the first table reading and the first draft and it's just an extraordinary group of people. I just had an understanding of the show and what it meant and what I was trying to do. It felt like a gig where there was a lot of connections, and everyone's purpose was the same and we all knew why we were there.

You say you need to love a project to get involved. What do you love about "Good Omens"?

Regardless of the fact that it goes from the beginning of time to the end of time and takes place on Earth, [and in] heaven and hell, I think it is a story of true friendship and love between people. Amongst all of the insanity and the laughs and the drama and the excitement and the sheer oddness of everything that happens, I think at its heart it's a story of two people who don't necessarily belong in the world but find a place in the world with each other. I think that has spoken to a lot of people about navigating your way through life in a world that can be unpredictable. On top of all of that, I think it's a visual feast and holds some extraordinary performances.

As this year marks the 50th anniversary of Pride and the Stonewall riots, many organizations are pledging their support to the LGBTQ community. With a rich history of involvement with the LGBTQ rights movement, the City University of New York (CUNY) is home to the nation's first university-based research center completely dedicated to amassing the history, culture, politics, oppression and affirmation of the LGBTQ community. With this momentous anniversary, CUNY salutes faculty, staff, students and alumni who have stepped up to help the cause of advancing LGBTQ rights.

"The City University of New York is proud to be an integral part of the past and present history of the LGBTQ rights movement," said Chancellor Félix V. Matos Rodríguez, in a release from the university. "CUNY students, faculty and staff are working every day to raise awareness and support for the LGBTQ community through research, teaching and advocacy. There is much more that needs to be accomplished and we pledge our continued support, but on this 50th anniversary of Stonewall, I salute all those who have been part of the struggle for full equality for the LGBTQ community."

CUNY is lucky to have one of the country's most respected and influential gay-rights activists over the past 50 years as one of its professors. Martin Duberman, who is a distinguished professor of history, emeritus at Lehman College and the Graduate Center, has written numerous books, including the 1994 classic "Stonewall," which chronicles the uprising that took place at the Stonewall Inn 50 years ago, cementing June as Pride Month around the world. The 88-year-old professor is still looking for advancement for those in his community and hopes that the younger generation will return to the "radical spirit" of the initial movement.

"In the past half-century we've gone from being all but uniformly pathologized and condemned — yes, even hunted — to being widely accepted as a legitimate minority," Duberman writes in a revised version of his classic book. "Today, as LGBTQ people in the United States and abroad look on aghast while courts and politicians move with a renewed boldness to strip what rights we have, we would do well to remember the roots of the modern gay liberation movement."

Another faculty member being commended by the university this year is Tany Domi, the media relations director at the CUNY Graduate Center. Domi is a veteran and an activist who helped lead the charge advocating for the repeal of unjust policies that banned openly gay people from serving in the military such as "don't ask, don't tell," which was officially abandoned under President Obama in 2011. Domi served in the Army for 15 years and became the director of the Military Freedom Initiative of the National Gay, Lesbian and Transgender Task Force.

"When I look back at when I came out in 1974 and all that I went through during my Army career — the investigations and humiliations and my bittersweet departure — I could never have fathomed the transformation of American society that emerged following the revocation of 'don't ask, don't tell,'" Domi said in a release. "The challenges remain in the quest to be accepted as an LGBTQ person here in America and around the world ... but I will celebrate with joy the Stonewall 50th anniversary here in New York, my hometown."

USWNT rolls again, takes down Chile 3-0 to regain Group F lead

The USA is off to the Round of 16 after another easy win in Group F play.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

Different-looking squad, same result.

It wasn't exactly a 13-0 thumping like last week against Thailand, but the United States women's national team made easy work of Chile with a 3-0 win on Sunday afternoon.

The result clinched their place in the Round of 16 and helped the U.S. reclaim first place in Group F after Sweden temporarily went to the top after their win against Thailand.

Manager Jill Ellis made seven changes from the team that thrashed Thailand last week. She had a completely different starting trio in attack with Carli Lloyd, Mallory Pugh and Christen Press in for Alex Morgan, Tobin Heath and Megan Rapinoe.

Lloyd was keen on showing that she can still carry the U.S. attack after being designated as a substitute before the tournament, recording two goals on the day.

She made her presence felt almost immediately, getting the Americans off the mark in the 11th minute.

The 36-year-old New Jersey native cannoned home a left-footed volley from just inside the 18-yard box to put the U.S. ahead. Chilean goalkeeper Christiane Endler was rooted to her spot and could only watch as Lloyd's shot nestled into the back of the net.

It was a historic tally for Lloyd, who became the first player to ever score a goal in six straight games at the Women's World Cup.

Carli Lloyd (No. 10) netted a pair of goals in the United States' 3-0 victory over Chile. GETTY IMAGES

It could have been much more for the U.S. had it not been for Endler. Her numerous dazzling saves served as a reminder that she is one of the best in the world. In total, she turned away six American shots in one of the most impressive displays of goalkeeping at the tournament so far.

Endler, however, couldn't keep out Julie Ertz's powerful header off a corner in the 26th minute. With her back toward goal, Ertz was able to direct a well-hit corner by Tierna Davidson inside the near post off Endler's hands and in.

Eight minutes later, Lloyd picked up her second off another corner from Davidson to put the U.S. in the driver's seat for good.

The U.S. had its fair share of chances in the second half to turn the affair into a blowout, but Endler robbed Press three times while Lloyd missed a penalty for her hat trick.

Among Ellis' other changes, Ertz went back into her holding midfield role while bringing the veteran center back Becky Sauerbrunn back into the fold. The defense looked strong yet again as Chile could muster just one single attempt toward the U.S. goal. Zero were on target.

With one remaining match in the group stage, the U.S. will meet Sweden on Thursday to decide the winner of Group F. Due to their superior goal difference, the U.S. will need either a draw or win to get the top spot.

Sweden has a history against the U.S. and will be considered the Americans' first real test of the World Cup. Ranked ninth in the world, Sweden knocked the U.S. out of the Olympics at the quarterfinal stage back in 2016.

Mets notes: Syndergaard hurt, Wheeler market heating up

The New York Mets experienced a busy Sunday in the news when it came to their starting pitching staff.

Here is the latest on two of them:

SYNDERGAARD HITS THE IL

It's been a frustrating 2019 season for Noah Syndergaard, the fireballing righty looking like a shell of his former self.

Inconsistencies have reigned supreme over 15 starts this season as the 26-year-old is 5-4 with a 4.55 ERA.

It's one thing to be able to throw 100 miles per hour. It's something entirely different to make them consistently miss.

Syndergaard was tagged for four runs on six hits through six innings on Saturday night against the St. Louis Cardinals when he began grabbing at his leg in the seventh. He was immediately pulled after trainers came out to the mound and diagnosed with a hamstring strain.

The Mets placed him on the 10-day injured list on Sunday, when manager Mickey Callaway announced that he will undergo an MRI. Callaway did not disclose who would step in for Syndergaard, who was scheduled to start Thursday against the Chicago Cubs.

TEAMS WATCHING WHEELER

As the Mets continue to toe the .500 line, their status come the July 31 trade deadline is still unclear.

If they remain in the hunt for the National League East crown, expect them to be buyers as they look for help in the bullpen and center field.

Should another summer collapse come, the Mets will be one of the most attractive sellers in baseball.

Contending teams desperate for pitching help will be lighting up general manager Brodie Van Wagenen's phone. Jon Heyman of MLB Network reported on Sunday that "many teams" like Mets righty Zack Wheeler, most notably, the Yankees.

Wheeler will be a free agent at season's end and has stated that he wouldn't take a discount to stay with the Mets. Yet his numbers haven't necessarily suggested that he should be paid like a top-end starter.

Through his first 14 starts, he sported a 4.87 ERA and is coming off an outing in which he was thumped for nine runs on 10 hits in 4.2 innings against the Yankees on June 11.

The Yankees are desperate for starting pitching depth after losing out on Dallas Keuchel. JA Happ, CC Sabathia and James Paxton have struggled this season while the Yankees continue to wait for the return of Luis Severino. JOE PANTORNO

Knicks must adapt to save summer

With Anthony Davis headed to the Lakers and Kevin Durant recovering, the Knicks need a backup plan.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

The original offseason plans of the New York Knicks already look dead in the water and we haven't even come close to the thick of the NBA's offseason action.

Now it's time for president Steve Mills and general manager Scott Perry to adapt.

Just days after the completion of the NBA Finals — and with two weeks until the start of free agency on July 1 — two of the biggest names linked with the Knicks are on different paths now.

The New Orleans Pelicans sent the basketball world into a frenzy on Saturday night by trading superstar center Anthony Davis to the Los Angeles Lakers.

In return, New Orleans continued to add to their war chest of young assets by picking up Lonzo Ball, Brandon Ingram, Josh Hart and three first-round draft picks.

The 26-year-old, considered by many to be the best center in the NBA, will be a free agent following the 2019-20 season. His declaration that he wouldn't re-sign with the Pelicans in February is what set the trade rumor mill ablaze for most of the past four months.

While the Pelicans had the power to trade him where they so pleased, looming free agency gave Davis the power to help dictate where he'd end up.

New Orleans' haul was only going to be a good one if Davis would be willing to re-sign with the trade partner.

The Knicks were one of the teams Davis reportedly said he would re-sign with, along with the Lakers.

Los Angeles might have done the Knicks a favor, however, seeing as New York can hold on to its No. 3 pick in the draft with a clear path to Duke's RJ Barrett.

It also allows the Knicks to keep both max-salary slots open for free agents while retaining some of their more promising talents. In a hypothetical deal for Davis, the Knicks would have had to part ways with the likes of center Mitchell Robinson and forward Kevin Knox.

It remains to be seen how the Knicks are going to allocate those two max-salary slots. For most of the past year, the belief was that they would be able to bring on Kevin Durant and Kyrie Irving.

That might not be the case anymore.

Durant ruptured his Achilles during the NBA Finals and will likely miss the entire 2019-20 season, which makes a max salary a risky investment.

Irving, on the other hand, is preparing to come to the Big Apple, but with the Brooklyn Nets.

A consolation prize for the point guard position, Kemba Walker made it known last week that his top priority is to remain with the Charlotte Hornets.

The market for a point guard — a position that has plagued the Knicks for years — is less than ideal after Irving and Walker as Ricky Rubio, Patrick Beverley and Darren Collison headline the unrestricted free-agent class.

But Irving potentially joining the Nets presents the Knicks with an opportunity to acquire a much more promising option.

D'Angelo Russell would likely leave Brooklyn if Irving arrives, though his status is up in the air. The 23-year-old All-Star is currently a restricted free agent but could become an unrestricted one if the Nets renounce his rights to go after another max-salary free agent.

The Knicks would probably have to use one of their max-salary slots on Russell, but they'd be picking up a developing talent that averaged 21.1 points and seven assists per game last season.

Russell fits the theme of a Knicks team that would be rebuilt through the development of its youthful talent, though the second max-salary slot could be used to bring in a proven veteran to provide the franchise with a bona fide leader to help them move toward contention in the Eastern Conference.

Knee Arthritis Pain?
10 Year Medical Study Reveals Knee Replacement Avoided With Newest Medical Treatment In 3 of 4 Cases

If you suffer with painful knee arthritis – science may have finally found the answer you've been looking for.

Here's why: What should be looked at as a landmark and startling study by the medical world, research published by a noted Orthopedic Surgeon in the Journal Of Knee Surgery revealed that 75% of those with Grade IV (often called "bone on bone") knee arthritis were able to avoid the surgery more than 7 years and beyond.

When doctors accurately placed FDA approved lubricating medicines using advanced imaging into almost 2000 arthritic knees (like putting oil on a rusty door hinge or automobile engine) the majority of patients actually responded well enough to avoid major and complex knee replacement surgery. But, the procedure needs to be done by experienced doctors using the best technology for optimum technique and results.

Know this: This is an FDA-cleared REAL medical treatment that must be given by a skilled professional.

These special treatments are now available right here in NYC for Tri-State area arthritis sufferers. And many insurances, even Medicare, cover these treatments for qualified patients.

More Good News: NYC Pain MD, the NYC area's "go to' medical group for non-surgical arthritis pain management is now offering these simple, in-office treatment programs and offers a No-Cost, No-Obligation screening appointment to find out if you qualify. To speak with a scheduling coordinator about a screening appointment, just call 877-228-5490.
